

Lead equitable educational organizations

The Doctor of Education in Educational Leadership online (EDL online) program, which results in an EdD degree, will prepare you to understand and apply relevant research and theory as a leader of K-12 classrooms, schools and districts. Designed to accommodate your schedule as a working professional, this three-year program trains you to become a critically conscious leader with the skills to address inequities in education that affect learning opportunities and outcomes.

The EDL online program is only offered for the K-12 Leadership in Urban School Settings concentration.

DISSERTATION IN PRACTICE

The dissertation in practice is a doctoral dissertation with a more practical focus than a traditional dissertation. Under the guidance of faculty in your concentration, you will apply relevant research methods to tackle a problem of practice that impedes access to equitable educational opportunities and outcomes. The purpose of the dissertation in practice is to equip you with the knowledge and skills you will use to address existing problems in your workplace well beyond your completion of the program.

ONLINE LEARNING EXPERIENCE

Classes are conducted live in a real-time virtual classroom environment. The live sessions are facilitated by faculty and include highly interactive, engaging and collaborative discussions. Prior to attending live sessions, you will complete assignments submitted through the learning management system.

DESIGNED FOR WORKING PROFESSIONALS

Prior to the dissertation phase in your third year, you will take classes only one evening per week from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. PT.

ON-CAMPUS IMMERSION

As a student in the program, you are strongly encouraged to attend an immersion experience on the USC University Park Campus a few weeks before the course start date. The immersion experience, which includes the orientation to the program, will provide the opportunity to meet your classmates and faculty members, develop the academic skills necessary for success in the program and explore a process for critical reflection. Travel and accommodations for the immersion are not included in the cost of the program.
